

POST 1

There is no one-size-fits-all approach to educating the children in our communities. We need a new, fairer school funding approach that addresses the unique, individual learning needs of all students and provides them with competitive skills for good-paying jobs. Learn more: fundmischools.org

POST 2

As superintendent, I want the best for the children in our community. That's why I support the School Finance Research Collaborative. They are calling for a new, fairer school funding approach that addresses every student's unique and individual learning needs. Learn more: fundmischools.org

POST 3

Did you know Michigan ranks in the bottom 10 states in almost all education measures? This is unacceptable and needs to change. The School Finance Research Collaborative is calling for a new, fairer school funding approach to ensure all Michigan students have the same opportunity at getting a good education. Learn more: fundmischools.org

POST 4 (with infographic)

It costs a minimum $9,590 to educate a child in Michigan. But, some students need more support — including students living in poverty. Learn how a new, fairer school funding approach is needed to meet every student's unique needs: <https://www.fundmischools.org>

POST 5 (with infographic)

Seventy percent of Michiganders believe our schools are underfunded. The School Finance Research Collaborative has provided a new approach to fixing Michigan's broken school funding approach. Read more about our call for a new, fairer school funding approach in the Detroit Free Press: <http://bit.ly/SFRC-poll>